U.S. Deputy Agriculture Secretary speaks at Ag Summit

U.S. Deputy Agriculture Secretary Kathleen Merrigan was the keynote speaker during the Agribusiness Summit held in Charleston on Nov. 13.

Merrigan, who previously served as an Assistant Professor and Director of the Agriculture, Food and Environment Program at the Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy at Tufts University in Boston, spoke to the assembled crowd about "Know Your Farmer, Know Your Food" initiative.

"We see a local foods revolution," Merrigan said. She added the USDA is expecting a growth in locally grown foods.

SC Peanut Board Donates Peanut Butter to Harvest Hope

The South Carolina Peanut Board delivered a donation of 7,000 12-ounce jars of peanut butter to Harvest Hope Food Bank in Columbia on Nov. 17.

Denise Holland, Harvest Hope CEO, along with Hugh Weathers, SC Commissioner of Agriculture, and Brad Boozer, Executive Director of the SC Peanut Board, were on hand to welcome the shipment to the Food Bank warehouse. From there the peanut butter will be distributed to more than 400 non-profit member agencies in the 20 counties of central South Carolina served by Harvest Hope.

November is National Peanut Butter Lovers Month, so what better way for the SC Peanut Board to celebrate than to provide a nutritious and satisfying donation of what many consider a staple – like bread and milk. Peanuts and peanut butter are packed with energy, protein, and all kinds of vitamins and minerals. That's especially important to those in our state who are nutritionally at-risk.

Pee Dee REC hosts boll weevil meeting

The South Carolina Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation will hold its annual cotton growers meeting at 10 a.m. on Dec. 15 at Clemson University's Pee Dee Research and Education Center in Florence.

Growers will hear updates from the USDA Farm Service Agency, the Clemson University Cooperative Extension Service, the SC Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation, the Southeast Boll Weevil Eradication Program and Clemson University Regulatory Services.

"This is the grower's opportunity for input and to have questions answered regarding the boll weevil eradication program that is so important to South Carolina cotton growers," said David Howle, Assistant Director, Clemson University Regulatory Services.

For more information, contact David Howle at 864-646-2120 or by e-mail at dhowle@clemson.edu.

From the Cornfield to Centerfield

Babe Ruth, Joe DiMaggio, Reggie Jackson. Those are all names associated with Yankees Baseball. Now add Brett Gardner of Holly Hill to that list.

Brett, whose father Jerry farms 2,600 acres of corn, soybeans, wheat and cotton in lower Orangeburg County, helped the Yankees to a 2009 World Championship as their centerfielder. If you watched the games he was the left hand batter number 11 whose speed could change the opposing pitcher's demeanor.

Jerry said Brett spent as much time as he could away from the baseball diamond working on the farm, mostly running the tractor or combine or anything he was asked to do.

That strong farm work ethic is what he's known for in his baseball career. Brett, a walk-on at the College of Charleston, led the nation in hitting and was third team All-American his junior year. Former Cougar Baseball coach John Pawlowski has been quoted as saying what stood out about Brett was his willingness to show up early to practice and stay late. Jerry agrees.

Jerry added that Brett may not be the most talented player on the field, but he has a strong desire to work twice as hard as the next guy.

That hard work paid off when Brett was drafted in the third round to the Yankees.

Jerry was a pretty good ballplayer himself, having played Triple A ball for the Phillies, He got to attend the first two games of the World Series to watch Brett play. After all, he's a farmer and harvest doesn't wait.

What's not hard to like is Brett Gardner's work ethic coupled with his humble attitude that has made him a hit with the fans. Back in June Brett ran head first into a wall to save two runs during a game. I remember when he broke his thumb on a play this summer, and that he was back in the lineup in less time than expected.

Jerry related a story of how Brett befriended Nico Viglitti - a young girl in the hospital in New York. One afternoon after spending the day reading books about baseball to her, she presented him with a bracelet. She said if he wore the bracelet, then he'd hit a homerun. That night, standing in for Johnny Damon, Brett hit an inside-the-park homerun. Jerry said right after that homerun, Nico got a long-awaited heart transplant she desperately needed.

When you grow up on a farm nothing is easy, and the same can be said for making it to the major leagues. The same work ethic farmers across this great state (and country) have are what makes this nation so unique. It's always heart warming to hear the story of the young man who worked harder than the guy next to him to make it in professional sports.

If Brett himself were writing this, he'd probably say that the same could also be said for the farmer who rises early every morning to ensure the cattle are fed and the crops are worked.

I applaud Brett Gardner's strong determination to be successful and the way he has carried himself through good times and otherwise. And, I applaud the farmers of this state and country for the same reasons.

Hugh E. Weathers, Commissioner

This year the USDA started a new campaign called "Know Your Farmer, Know Your Food." This is a USDA-wide effort to create new economic opportunities by better connecting consumers with local producers. It is also the start of a national conversation about the importance of understanding where food comes from and how it gets to your plate.

Merrigan also complimented the SC Department of Agriculture for its Certified SC Grown branding campaign, started in 2007 to encourage people to buy locally grown foods.

Merrigan said the USDA will continue to support local farmers through programs such as farmers markets, Community Supported Agriculture (CSA's) and other avenues to encourage consumers to buy local.

The Agribusiness Summit is hosted by the Palmetto Institute and is held annually bringing together industry leaders from government, academics, farming and forestry to look at the future of agribusiness in South Carolina.

Peanut Butter

Commissioner Weathers said, “I deeply appreciate this collaborative effort between the SC Peanut Board and Harvest Hope. Partnerships like this along with dollars and volunteers help ensure that everyone in South Carolina has enough to eat and that no one goes to bed hungry.”

“We are seeing more and more hungry families and individuals lining up each day desperate for the most basic of nutritional necessities, and it is wonderful the SC Peanut Board has recognized that need and provided this staple food,” said Harvest Hope Chief Executive Officer Denise Holland. “As Commissioner Weathers said, these partnerships are essential to us to make sure we can continue to provide for the suffering in our community even as their numbers increase.”

“Harvest Hope is able to put 98 cents of every dollar toward providing food to the community,” Holland said. “From food drives and food delivery to community education and awareness, our staff works hard to oversee the daily operations of Harvest Hope and to meet the needs of the growing number of men, women and children in our area who will go to bed hungry tonight. We deeply appreciate the SC Peanut Board’s generous donation.”

Americans eat about three pounds of peanut butter per person every year. At that rate, the SC Peanut Board donation would be enough peanut butter to satisfy over 1,700 nutritionally at-risk people in South Carolina for an entire year.

South Carolina growers are expected to harvest about 47,000 acres of peanuts this year, according to the South Carolina Field Office of USDA Ag Statistics. That’s enough peanuts to make almost 1.4 billion peanut butter sandwiches.

For more information, contact Scott Garrick, Harvest Hope, 803-254-4432 or Brad Boozer, SC Peanut Board, 803-734-2225.
